

Community Services Consultancy

Suzi Quixley has worked in the Community Services and Health Industry for over 30 years. All Suzi's work is driven by a belief that Australian society (and other western-based social structures) fail to address the human rights of the majority of their citizens ... and that working toward social change is a fundamental ethical responsibility for all community services workers. Her work has included:

2007-present	Living in Adelaide, and undertaking full time community services consultancy. Since August 2007, Suzi has focused on 3 main areas. She provides participatory research, writing and editing for non-government organisations in Australia and internationally, training and organisational development with community organisations in Adelaide and professional supervision with a variety of community services industry workers. Suzi prioritises work related to disenfranchised communities including women, children, young people, refugees and HIV-affected groups. She commonly addresses issues such as human rights, homelessness, discrimination, family violence, ethics and imprisonment.
2004-2007	Living in Adelaide, Suzi undertook some research and writing alongside her mid-life crisis . During this period she worked as a Textile Artist and Florist and ran a shop under her other business name - suziQdesign.
1999-2003	Living in Singapore, and working as a Lecturer (Community Services Management) in the School of Business Management at Nanyang Polytechnic. During this time, Suzi travelled widely in Asia (and also went to Egypt). Professionally, she taught both school leavers and mature age industry workers in several diplomas. She also undertook consultancy work for various branches of the Singapore Government.
1989-1999	Living in Adelaide, and working nationally as a Consultant/Trainer in the Community Services and Health Industries. Almost 60% of Suzi's work was outside Adelaide, with a significant proportion of this in rural/remote areas. Key roles included conducting training, providing facilitation, working with individual clients, public speaking/chairing/moderating, undertaking consultation, working as a relief worker in youth and other community services agencies and writing for publication.
1986-1989	Living in Perth, and working as a Lecturer (Community & Behavioural Studies) at Edith Cowan University. Here, Suzi mainly taught in the Youth Work and Women's Studies programs.
1977-1986	Living in Adelaide, and working as a Youth Worker/Manager in various S.A. Government departments, including 3 years as Training and Development Officer with the Department of Agriculture and 5 years working with unemployed young people.
pre-1977	Living in Melbourne and Adelaide, and working in a variety of part time jobs. These included working as a Social Trainer with people with intellectual disability (Minda Inc), a Secretary/Receptionist (Business Films Pty Ltd & Dial a Secretary) and a Sales Assistant (Coles). Suzi also undertook significant voluntary work in the welfare sector with groups such as fellow students, people with disability and the aged, and was actively involved in student politics.
